

RESTRICTIONS ON THE
REMOVAL OF TREES
ON NEW SOUTH WALES
WATERCOURSES

FOREWORD

The development of land in New South Wales has resulted in the removal of much of the timber cover which existed at the time European settlement began.

Trees along rivers generally strengthen and protect the banks against erosion. The retaining of a strong vegetative cover of trees along the banks of streams is most important. However, indiscriminate clearing along many rivers has contributed to serious bank erosion with subsequent loss of extensive areas of fertile alluvial land. It is essential that the stability of river banks and carrying capacity of rivers be preserved and that their natural beauty be retained. The pleasant picture on the cover is an attractive example of what our rivers could and should be.

In many cases, however, selective clearing can be of considerable benefit particularly where the growth and spread of trees has almost completely blocked the flow of water resulting in increased flooding. In order to control the destruction of trees along rivers legislation was enacted in 1946 which made it an offence to cut down, ring-bark or destroy any tree, sapling, shrub or scrub within 20 metres of the bank or in the bed of any prescribed river or lake without the permission of the Forestry Commission.

For twenty-six years the administration of this legislation was undertaken by the Forestry Commission. In 1972 the administration passed to the Catchment Areas Protection Board under the provisions of the Forestry, Soil Conservation and Other Acts (Amendment) Act.

The prohibition of the destruction of trees along the streams of the State applies whether or not the timber stands on private property and even if it is the owner who wishes to cut it down. However, the Catchment Areas Protection Board may issue permits for the removal of selected trees. Application forms are available from the Board or from the District Offices of the Soil Conservation Service of New South Wales.

The purpose of this booklet is to draw to the attention of landholders and other interested persons, those streams and lakes which have been prescribed in terms of the Act.

The groupings in the text are:

- (a) Inland Rivers.
- (b) Coastal Rivers.
- (c) Lakes.

Groupings (a) and (b) are divided into sub-groupings of the important rivers and their tributaries. An alphabetical sequence is used in each group and sub-group.

The names used are those approved by the Geographical Names Board or shown on the 1:100,000,000 or 1:50,000 scale topographical maps or the cadastral (county and parish) maps published by the New South Wales Department of Lands.

I urge landholders, and all other persons with the right or position to do so, to ensure that the spirit of the legislation is observed and the unthinking practices of the past reversed, so that the bank stability, carrying capacity and natural beauty of the streams of this State will be restored and preserved.

A. R. L. Gordon,
Minister for Conservation and Water Resources.

The following rivers and lakes and sections of rivers to which the provisions of section 26D of the Water Act, 1912-1972 apply, have been prescribed by virtue of the provisions of Part II of the said Act.

The lists are compiled under the headings, "Inland Rivers", "Coastal Rivers", and "Lakes". Where renaming has occurred under the provisions of the Geographical Names Act, 1966, the former name is shown in parenthesis.
